Pols call for cams, special prosecutors

Easing tensions.
The Democrats
weighed in on how to ease tension between cops and demonstrators.

In the wake of the Baltimore riots, presidential candidate Hillary Clinton and another New York Democrat also thought to have his eye on the White House, Gov. Andrew Cuomo, got behind two major criminal justice reforms Wednesday.

For Clinton, it was backing the widespread use of police body cameras and an end to excessive prison sentences in the aftermath of the Baltimore riots.

For Cuomo, it was the promise of an executive order appointing special prosecutors in cases like Freddie Gray's death in Baltimore and Eric Garner's on Staten Island.

Pushing for reform

Cuomo has been trying to get the Albany Legislature to pass a package of reforms and now says he will move ahead on the use of special prosecutors with or without them.

- "These families have endured unspeakable losses and their voices are important ones in this debate," Cuomo's counsel Alphonso David said in a statement. "The governor has vowed to keep the dialogue open and meet with them again in the coming weeks."

Clinton / GETTY IMAGES

"We have to come to terms with some hard truths about race and justice in America," Clinton said at Columbia University.

"There is something wrong when a third of all black men face the prospect of prison during their lifetimes," she said, calling on Congress to help "end the era of mass incarceration."

Clinton was speaking at the 18th Annual David N. Dinkins Leadership and Public Policy Forum named in honor of New York's first, and so far, only black mayor.

Clinton addressed the violence in Baltimore, where rioters looted stores and burned buildings to the ground after the funeral of Gray, a 25-year-old black man who died after suffering injuries while in police custody.

After missing several meetings with the families of New Yorkers who had relatives die at the hands of police, the governor met with relatives from 10 different cases.

From the Albany Times Union: "If lawmakers don't approve his call for an independent monitor to oversee legal proceedings that follow such deaths Cuomo will use his executive powers to go even farther and create a special prosecutor who would have the power to pursue charges against officers."

Gwen Carr, the mother of Eric Garner, the Staten Island man who died in a police chokehold, was among those present. So was Constance Malcolm, mother of Ramarley Graham, who was shot dead by a cop at the family's Bronx home in 2012. The cop who pulled the trigger was convicted, but the finding was later overturned.

body-cams:
Should be
'the norm'

In reference to the ongoing outrage and protesting in Baltimore, Hillary Clinton said there is a need for more trust between police and the public they serve. Body cameras, she said, are a necessary part of that.

"There is something wrong when the trust between law enforcement and the communities they serve breaks down as far as it has in many of our communities," she said.

Clinton said body-worn cameras for police should be "the norm everywhere."

"That will improve transparency and accountability; it will help protect good people on both sides of the lens." JOHN. A. OSWALD

Verdict looming

Patz jury still deadlocked

Jurors in the New York murder trial of a man who confessed to killing 6-year-old Etan Patz in 1979 will return Thursday for a 12th day of deliberations after a judge refused to accept the panel's claim that it was unable to reach a verdict.

The jury, which is weighing kidnapping and murder charges against Pedro Hernandez, will begin rehearing closing arguments from both the prosecution and the defense. That process is expected to take until Friday.

In 2012, Hernandez, a 54-year-old, former deli worker, confessed to police that he had choked Patz, stuffed him in a box and left his still-moving body in an alley. His attorneys argued that he is mentally ill. REUTERS

Denim Day. The annual event is named after an Italian Supreme Court case, in which a rape sentence was overturned because the victim was wearing tight jeans.

Advocates held signs reading messages such as "my body is mine" as Police Commissioner Bill Bratton speaks. / CARLOS LLAMAS

Police Commissioner Bill Bratton and other elected officials donned denim on Wednesday morning to call for more to be done to end sexual assault in the city.

Bratton said sexual assault is something the NYPD takes "very, very seriously," and called on the public to do their part in helping victims report sexual crimes to the authorities as soon as possible.

"We are committed to working and collaborating with all of you," Bratton said. "None of us are missing in action."

Denim Day is an annual call to action for sexual assault awareness. The day is named after an 1998 Italian Supreme Court case, in which a rape sentence was overturned because the victim was wearing tight jeans.

Recent numbers from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found 1 in 5 women have been raped, and 1 in 2 women experienced some kind of sexual violence against them.

Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer remembered Ana Charle, the director of a Bronx homeless shelter who was allegedly shot and killed, and possibly sexually assaulted, by a former resident, West Spruill, on Monday.

"If that isn't a reason to be here today, I don't know what is," Brewer said. Elected officials called for support on a Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand's Campus Accountability & Safety Act to pass, and Councilwoman Laurie Cumbo touted a bill she is co-sponsoring that would put a panic button in the back of all New York City taxi and delivery cabs "so a woman can feel safe traveling home late at night." Last December, Gov. Andrew Cuomo's office released the number of sexual assaults reported at campuses across the state.

Charlene Rymsha, who is a graduate student at Fordham University, said she's concerned about a lack of transparency when it comes to campus sexual violence.

"It's my understanding that things aren't talked about and are brushed under the rug," Rymsha said.

4 train. Cops hunting for groper

City cops have released a photo of a 40-something man they say groped a 31-year-old woman on a downtown 4 train last week.

The NYPD's 14th Precinct says the incident happened on April 21, at the 42nd Street and Lexington Avenue stop.

It was just before 6 p.m. when the man allegedly groped her and grabbed her buttocks. The victim took a

The suspect is a male Hispanic, in his 40s, approximately 5-feet-9, weighing 185 pounds, with medium complexion and salt and pepper hair, cops said.

FBI facilitated ransom payment from hostage Weinstein's family: WSJ

The U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation in 2012 helped facilitate a ransom payment from the family of American hostage Warren Weinstein to al Qaeda in an unsuccessful attempt to get him released, the Wall Street Journal said on Wednesday.

Weinstein was accidentally killed in a U.S. drone strike in Pakistan in January, the White House announced last week. U.S. policy prohibits paying ransoms for hostages.

White House spokesman Josh Earnest, asked about the report on Wednesday, said he had not yet seen it and could not comment. "Our policy on this hasn't changed," he told reporters.

There was no immediate comment on the report from the FBI.

A person who worked closely with the Weinstein family told Reuters last week that the family paid a "small amount" in 2012 to people who claimed to be guarding the American aid worker, after receiving proof he was their captive.

The source said the FBI was aware of the payment. REUTERS

Lethal injection case exposes top court's death penalty divide

Tensions on the Supreme Court over America's use of the death penalty boiled over on Wednesday as the justices appeared split in a case challenging Oklahoma's lethal injection method as a breach of the Constitution's ban on cruel and unusual punishment.

The nine-member court's five conservatives seemed likely to side with Oklahoma in the case brought by three death row inmates.

Meanwhile, its four liberals expressed doubt about the propriety of using the drug at the center of the dispute.

Microsoft to put Android apps on Windows phones

Microsoft will allow apps from rival Google's Android system onto its own Windows phones later this year to attract users to its unpopular mobile devices, the company's operating systems chief said on Wednesday.

The move marks a radical shift in strategy for the world's biggest software company, which still dominates the personal computer market, but has failed to get any real traction on tablets and phones, partly because of a lack of apps.

a shortage of toilets and clean water.

"In the next few days or weeks I am sure there will be an outbreak of epidemics," said Raj, who is involved in the relief effort.

Foreign Secretary Shanker Das Bairagi appealed for specialist doctors from overseas, as well as for search-and-rescue teams despite earlier suggestions from officials that Nepal did not need more such assistance.

"Our top priority is for relief and rescue teams. We need neurologists, orthopedic surgeons and trauma surgeons," Bairagi said. Experts from a Polish NGO that has an 87-strong team in Nepal have said the chances of finding people alive in the ruins five days after the quake were "next to zero.. REUTERS after rioting, looting and arson that injured 20 officers and led to 250 arrests.

A weeklong curfew that began Tuesday helped police thwart violence. Police said 35 people have been arrested since then.

In the relative calm, residents in the most affected neighborhoods vented their frustration with police.

"The police have a gang mentality, they are above the law and that's the problem," said Timothy O'Donnell, a former gang member and part-time student from West Baltimore, where Gray was from, as he stood with other men outside a convenience store.

Police have said they will conclude their investigation by Friday, when the results will be turned over to state prosecutors and followed by an independent review. The U.S. Department of Justice is conducting a separate probe into possible civil rights violations. REUTERS

A weeklong curfew that began Tuesday helped police thwart violence. Police said 35 people have been arrested since then.

Reeling from its worst civil unrest in decades, Baltimore found a semblance of calm on Wednesday as residents await an official account of the death of a 25-year-old black man that set off rioting.

Beyond seeking answers to the fate of Freddie Gray, who died after suffering spinal injuries while in police custody, citizens highlighted the need to reform policing practices in the largely black city.

The violence in Baltimore prompted national figures — from the new U.S. Attorney General Loretta Lynch to Democratic presidential hopeful Hillary Clinton — to weigh in on Wednesday and vow to work on improving law enforcement and criminal justice in minority communities nationwide.

With police and National Guard troops patrolling Baltimore's streets, schools reopened and business resumed in the city of 620,000 two days

Internet. Rand Paul moves to block new 'net neutrality' rules

U.S. Sen. Rand Paul (R-KY) / GETTY IMAGES

Sen. Rand Paul, a Republican presidential hopeful, on Wednesday introduced a resolution to block new regulations on Internet service providers, saying they would "wrap the Internet in red tape."

The "net neutrality" rules, which are slated to take effect in June, are backed by the Obama administration and were passed by the Democratic majority of the Federal Communications Commission in February. AT&T Inc and wireless and cable trade associations are challenging them in court.

Paul's resolution, if adopted, would allow the Senate to fast-track a vote to establish that Congress disapproves of the FCC's new rules and moves to nullify them.

The move marks the most proactive position yet by Paul, a libertarian from Kentucky, on net neutrality, the principle that Internet providers should treat all Web traffic equally. The issue has grabbed national attention and prompted a record 4 million comments to the FCC, many of them from regular Americans calling to restrict Internet providers.

Paul's position, shared by anti-regulation conservatives, pits him against net neutrality advocates in the technology and startup communities.

The rules ban Internet providers from blocking

"The Internet has successfully flourished without the heavy hand of government interference ... Stated simply, I do not want to see the government regulating the Internet."

Paul said in a statement or slowing down any websites and from striking deals with content companies for smoother downloads. Internet providers say they oppose not those principles themselves but the FCC's decision to set those rules by dramatically changing the regulatory regime, which gives the agency much wider authority over the Internet.

The rules have also faced opposition from Paul's rival Republican presidential candidates, including Texas Sen. Ted Cruz, who has called them "Obamacare for the Internet," and Florida Sen. Marco Rubio.

Paul's resolution is almost certain to face a veto from President Obama. Republican leaders of key technology committees have been trying to negotiate with Democrats to write a new law to counter the FCC's rules.

Republican budget plan clears hurdle with senator's signature

Sen. Bob Corker endorsed the first joint House-Senate budget in six years on Wednesday, clearing the way for passage later this week of the Republican prescription to slash domestic spending.

Corker had been the last holdout among Republican members of a 30-member budget negotiating committee, citing concerns over provisions that would allow higher spending on discretionary government programs.

"I have had conversations on both sides of the Capitol laying out what

Quoted

"There is no question this budget is far from perfect, but it is some progress since it has been a long time since the Congress has completed this basic part of governing."

Corker in a statement

I believe we need to do to prepare for next year's budget process so that we can make much greater progress toward addressing the tremendous fiscal challenges our country faces," Corker said.

His signature means the budget agreement between Republicans who control the House and Senate could get a House vote by Friday. REUTERS

'My Drunk Kitchen.' YouTube star Hannah Hart shares her journey

Hannah Hart worked as a proofreader in New York when one day she had a brilliant plan: She was going to upload a video of herself cooking drunk on YouTube and send it to her friend. Four years later, Hart has 1.8 million subscribers on her channel "My Drunk Kitchen": Hart talked to us about her unexpected success and how her life has changed.

How did you get started?

I was on GChat with a friend of mine because my sister had just gotten me a webcam when I moved from San Francisco to New York, and we were talking and she said how much she missed when I was drunk and pretending to cook.

Drunk cooking was something you were known for?
It wasn't anything of note. She just said, "I miss getting drunk and cooking with you."

Is it surreal to you that now this is your job?

It was super surreal and super fun. It's the best job in the world if you like to worry. You're your own boss; it's everybody's dream.

Who were your favorite guests on your show?

Jamie Oliver is always a lot of fun to shoot with. Lance Bass is so nice and so funny and Mary Louise Parker was a total delight.

What's your drink when cooking?

Hard to say — usually wine. I really enjoy cooking with a glass of wine. Wine gives you a way worse hangover than vodka, though.

What's been the coolest moment of

Question

Have you become a better cook?

I have! I can kind of eyeball-measure and see what's going to work and what's not going to work. Except when I made carrot cake using olive oil.

your YouTube career?

I think the coolest moment of this career is that we run a volunteer day called Have a Hart Day. It started when I went on tour in 2013 and I went to food banks in 22 cities and we shot episodes with people who watched the show and we all volunteered together. Also, I published a book last year, "My Drunk Kitchen," and that book was on the best-seller list for six to eight weeks and that was really, really cool. ANDREA PARK, METRO

Stupid MONEY MYTHS

The Ripple Effect

If you are living by the old money paradigm, your financial future is in serious jeopardy. Our country is still feeling the ripple effect from the 2008 financial crash. And, I believe another one is on the horizon.

You Can't Win The Game If You Don't Know The Rules

The rules have changed. Sadly, most people still operate under the old money paradigm: go to school; get a job; work hard; save; invest in a 401k, etc. How's that working out for you? For most people, it's NOT!

Investors Get Money To Work For Them

If you cling to the old money paradigm, you will have to work harder and harder. Investors get money to work for them, instead of constantly working for money. The poor and middle class buy liabilities they mistake for assets. Investors acquire assets.

Robert Kiyosaki will not attend this event.

Justin Bieber's 'Zoolander 2' cameo confirmed

BEN STILLER, INSTAGRAM

I was really getting excited about the upcoming "Zoolander" sequel, but now? I don't know. Ben Stiller confirmed via an Instagram pose-off that Justin Bieber will be making a cameo in the film. And while no details were provided about his character, I can't help but notice a striking resemblance between the two. And, you know, Derek Zoolander did have an infant son at the end of the first film—one with some Blue Steel talents of his own. Bieber could totally pass for 15, right? Except that role is already taken by actual teenager Cyrus Arnold. So maybe Papa Zoolander has another, slightly older son he wasn't previously aware of?

Kristen Stewart: Hollywood is 'disgustingly sexist'

GETTY IMAGES

This might not really be news, but it's nice to hear someone prominent spell it out all the same. Former "Twilight" star Kristen Stewart is speaking out about the institutionalized sexism in the entertainment industry, telling Harper's Bazaar U.K. that "women inevitably have to work a little bit harder to be heard. Hollywood is disgustingly sexist. It's crazy. It's so offensive, it's crazy." And that's not all she has a problem with. Stewart also takes issue with people who see fame as a career goal. "Fame is the worst thing in the world. Especially if it's pointless," she says. "When people say, 'I want to be famous,' why? You don't do anything." So much for the old cult of personality.

Nick Jonas overthinks his sex soundtracks

Nick Jonas only has one regret about when he lost his virginity. (Oh, by the way, the former promise ring-wearer is no longer a virgin, in case you were wondering.) "I think I would change the song," he tells Elle magazine in a revealing interview. "I don't want to say what song it was, but it was depressing. My iPod was on shuffle. It was a bad draw." Sure, but which is more of a mood killer, losing it to a terrible song, or stopping mid-coitus to click forward until you find something appropriately steamy?

Amy Schumer tackles girls without makeup

Amy Schumer's new season of "Inside Amy Schumer" is on an amazing roll. Now, she follows up her rape-y "Friday Night

Make some dark magic

Interview. Seth Gabel says his witch hunting character on "Salem" will be just as tortured as he was last season.

"Salem" is the sort of show where nothing is too weird or warped to happen. Witches store animals in people's bodies, perform dark rites of magic and, of course, get entangled in love affairs, in a way that melds "True Blood" and "American Horror Story" to creepy, suspenseful effect. While many of the names may be familiar to anyone who's read about the Salem witch trials, the characters are all a bit different from their historical namesakes, particularly in the case of Cotton Mather, who in the show's universe, is a hard-drinking, prostitute-loving tormented reverend striving to do what's right. We talked to Seth Gabel, who plays him, about what's to come, and in true "Salem" fashion, a bat briefly interrupted our interview. Gabel swears it's just coincidence, but does admit, "I wish my character would get some magic."

Cotton spent much of the first season suffering from the influence of his father. Now that he's gone, is Cotton freer? Well, he still feels it. He feels such guilt over having killed his own father, and committing patricide. I thought that going in he would have a feeling of freedom and of actually being able to live his life unbound by any expectations of his father.

Watch "Salem" Sundays at 10 p.m. on WGN America. / WGN AMERICA

SETH GABEL
GETTY IMAGES

But he's actually found quite the opposite, that more than ever he has his father's voice in his head berating him.

So he can't escape his father's voice? Right, and as the season progresses, you start to get a sense that perhaps it's not just in his head; perhaps the presence of his father is still lurking.

Everyone on the show commits some morally suspect acts, and it seems like John Alden (Shane West) has gone pretty far this season. Can Cotton pull him back?

I certainly hope so. It definitely seems like Alden has sold his soul to another kind of devil. ... The whole question of the show is once you've sold your soul, literally or metaphorically, can you be redeemed? If you've done something wrong, and have gone against who you really are, can you get yourself back? And can you do it alone, or does it take other people to believe in you? That remains to be seen.

Bonus question

Escaping the patriarchy

Everyone commits some dark acts. Are we meant to know who to root for?

What you discover over the course of the show is that every character is sympathetic, but we're all kind of victims of circumstance and victims of society and victims of what was established in the previous generations by our ancestors. ... They're all victims of whatever past system existed before them, and, for the women especially, the only way to have any power in Puritan society is to use magic and to go against what's accepted as being OK, and worship a different system. And that's not necessarily wrong. It's kind of their only choice, because otherwise they're slaves to this patriarchal society.

Race here on Derby day

Fancy hats, mint juleps and more ways to party.

EVA KIS
@thisiskis
eva.kis@metrowest.com

This Saturday is the 141st running of the Kentucky Derby, and there are probably that many varieties of the mint julep and parties to drink it at around town. Here are the ones that caught our eye.

You may be far from Churchill Downs, but that doesn't mean you can't drink like the fancy folks. Gaby Bar at the Sofitel (45 W. 44th St.) will be serving the race's official cocktails, both made with Mumm sparkling wines ($18) on Friday and Saturday; make it a party with tea sandwiches and sliders ($17). On Saturday, place your bets; exacta winners will receive a bottle of G.H. Mumm Cordon Rouge.

Sweetwater Social (643 Broadway) will have several specialty drinks like a Frozen Julep ($10) and Winners Circle Punch ($8), or choose from two different bourbon flights ($25). The food specials will take their inspiration from the South, and there will be prizes for those who come dressed to impress. If you're sticking around for the Mayweather-Pacquiao boxing match, $125 gets you into the VIP viewing party with a three-hour open bar, carving station and front-row seats.

If the day is just not the same without being at the track, head to Empire City Casino (810 Yonkers Ave., Yonkers, 914-457-2457), where Sports Illustrated cover girl Hannah Davis will be hosting the festivities, including judging the hat contest with a top prize of $500 (but all entrants get $10 to spend at the casino). Watch the race on screens set up on the apron of the racetrack while sipping your julep from the official Derby commemorative glass. They're screening the boxing match too, with two areas to watch it with all-you-can-eat specials at each.

Southern Hospitality

Keep the vibe authentic at the Bourbon & Bowties party at Memphis-style barbecue joint Southern Hospitality (645 Ninth Ave.), where a $20 cover includes a mint julep, food and contests, from betting on the ponies to best dressed. Win tickets to future races and celebrity-autographed swag.

Beginning at noon, Stone Rose Lounge (10 Columbus Circle) has Bullet Juleps and Derby-inspired bites by Porter House New York, but we're really in it for the complimentary sparkling

Southern Hospitality will be showing both the Derby and the Mayweather-Pacquiao fight. PROVIDED rosé for ladies in fancy hats and a photo booth with racing-themed props.

The Brits have been making a fuss about horse racing a lot longer than we have, but Pounds & Ounces (160 Eighth Ave.) is just getting into the excitement for the first time this year with a party beginning at 2 p.m. Watch the race on three large screens, wear your best hat for a chance at $500, and drink the Perfect Mint Julep made with Kentucky's Woodford Reserve (there's also Pub Ice Tea with Jack Daniels on tap). There's even a special dessert: a brown butter and Woodford torte topped with mint gelato and candied pecans.

Cocktail of the event

Shawn Chen of Decoy, the duck-focused restaurant beneath Chinese hot spot RedFarm, shared his version of the mint julep for your at-home celebrations.

The Mile High Julep

- 1¾ oz. TinCup American Whiskey
- ½ oz. Ancho Reyes Chile Liqueur
- ½ oz. ginger syrup
- ¼ oz. fresh lemon juice
- 6 to 8 mint leaves

Combine all ingredients in a shaker, hand-clapping the mint. Mix thoroughly, then pour over crushed ice and garnish with a large mint sprig and sprinkle with sugar.

Outdoor market season heats up

Spring is here when you're eating food from market stalls instead of delivery containers, and some of the city's most popular spots are setting up shop outside of their... shops.

Queens Night Market

This new Asia-focused international market debuted last Saturday at the New York Hall of Science for what could've been a one-off event, but it was a massive success. Expect more, and more varied, vendors from the initial 40, and the market is officially sticking around until October. Be prepared for lines, but the unique eats (takoyaki, Ecuadorian drinks, Chinese crepes) are worth braving the 7 train. Free, 6 p.m. to midnight. QueensNightMarket.com

Things to remember

It is not summer here year-round

While it can be appealing to escape to a warm beach while it is still chilly back home, it's important to check the weather charts if it's hot days on the sand you're seeking.

when the weather is warm and children are out of school, but that can mean that there are ships lined up in port when you arrive.

Storms can be intense

The peak hurricane season here is August through October, with October taking the brunt of the intense weather. While this can just mean rain or a thunderstorm, instead of an actual hurricane, it's better to avoid those months if you can.

Summer is a very popular time to visit

The most popular time to cruise here is summer — June through August —

Bermuda is known for its sandy beaches and crystal clear waters, but these are not the only attractions to be found on this North Atlantic island.

Bermuda is not technically part of the Caribbean. It's off the East Coast of the United States, nearest to North Carolina, in the Atlantic Ocean. But, when it comes to cruising, it gets lumped in with those more Southern islands all the time — which makes sense: For cruisers, Bermuda offers similar pleasures to vacationers—clear blue water, gorgeous beaches and coconut palms.

The Bermuda sand is a stunning shade of pale pink. It's tempting to take a cab or an excursion to the shore, and spend the whole day lying on a blanket or on a lounge chair in the sun. But, just underneath the surface of the cool, blue water are coral reefs filled with colorful fish and the remains of vessels that may have gotten caught in the so-called Bermuda Triangle or in the area's notoriously powerful storms. The barnacle-covered wrecks are gorgeous natural aquariums, making this a paradise for snorkelers and divers.

The island remains a British Overseas Territory and the British influence here is powerful — Union Jacks, colonial-style buildings, and businessmen in suit jackets with shorts and knee-high socks. Here, they like their pubs, their afternoon tea and most certainly their cricket. Sailing and fishing are popular ways to spend an afternoon, as much for locals as for visitors. And you'll find as many British brands in the shops as American ones.

The food and drinks also have a British flavor: The iconic drink of the island, the Dark 'N Stormy, is a sweet mix of ginger beer and Goslings dark rum. The local fish is served in fish and chips, codfish cakes, tomato-based fish chowder, and codfish "brunch" with bananas and potatoes. Hoppin' john, a side dish made with black eyed peas, is also

Glitz and glamour in Atlantic City

Trendy hotels, vibrant nightlife, luxury shopping and indulgent spas – the new, hip Atlantic City is targeting Millennials with upscale attractions and entertainment.

Atlantic City's glitter and glam are expanding beyond casinos. The famous gaming spots are still high-rolling, but there's a new emphasis on non-gambling diversions.

For shopping, it's still the Boardwalk for salt water taffy, but elsewhere, it's elite shopping. At The Pier Shops at Caesars, find Gucci and Burberry in a glass pavilion overlooking the ocean. In town, Tanger Outlets features over 80 name brand outlets. Find Edwin Pearl and Godiva at The Quarter at Tropicana.

Pamper yourself with a spa treatment. The Immersion spa at Borgata has floor-to-ceiling water views. Harrah's and Seaview both have Elizabeth Arden Red Door Spas, while Qua Baths and Spa at Caesars promises rejuvenation through the healing power of water.

While the casino-hotels have great restaurants, don't miss the fabulous local places. Girasole Ristorante serves Mediterranean specialties under the stars in their enclosed garden patio (www.girasoleac.com); Dock's Oyster House, open since 1897, has fine seafood and an award-winning wine list (www.docksoyster-house.com); and Kelseys' has the only soul food menu in Atlantic City with live jazz on weekends (www.kelseysvac.com).

For nightlife, dance to DJs or live music at dozens of lounges and nightclubs, sip signature cocktails at the sophisticated Blue Martini or go retro under the Boogie Nights disco ball. Entertainment headliners this summer include Melissa Etheridge, George Lopez and Tony Bennett with Lady Gaga.

Where to stay? The Courtyard by Marriott (non-casino) and The Golden Nugget both recently finished multi-million dollar renovations. The Claridge on the Boardwalk is a gem. Built in 1927 and restored to its former glory, it once welcomed the likes of Princess Grace, Frank Sinatra and

Horoscope

Taurus | April 21-May 21
Improving your financial position should be a priority. Formulate a realistic budget, call in debts and pay off high-interest loans.

Gemini | May 22-June 20
Don't be too free with your information. You will end up in a vulnerable position if your confidante has trouble keeping secrets.

Cancer | June 21-July 22
You are in charge of your destiny. It's up to you to make changes if you are dissatisfied with your position. Partnerships will suffer if you don't shake things up.

Leo | July 23-Aug. 22
Keep a close watch on your cash. Overspending will be your downfall. You won't have any luck sticking to a schedule, so lighten up.

Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22
Don't give in to peer pressure. Deception is imminent. Follow your heart and be firm if someone tries to take advantage of you.

Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22
Bide your time and do whatever it takes to get into fighting trim. A spontaneous trip to an out-of-the-way location will give you inspiration.

Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21
Let your creativity flow. Put your workplace worries on the back burner and surround yourself with people who share your passion.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21
Be prepared to experience a power struggle. You are best off keeping your opinions under wraps for now.

Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
You will experience a revelation regarding a project. Continue to fine-tune your plan until you feel that you are ready to make a presentation. Money is coming.

Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Some people will judge you harshly if your motives aren't clearly understood. You will help a worthy cause if you offer your time.

Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
Don't try to get away with something that you know is wrong. Exaggerating or embellishing your credentials will lead to disaster.

Aries | March 21-April 20
This is a great time to further your education or learn on the job. A position you are eyeing is attainable if you update your resume.

Letters to the editor

Don't misquote mayor

Re: 'Don't give Baltimore the right to loot' (Metro, April 29) I'm curious what right-wing spin machine had letter writer Sal Giarratani chime in on the comments of Baltimore's mayor. His cherry-picked quote is highly deceptive, putting an ellipsis before her remarks that "We also gave those who wished to destroy a space to do that." The full quote shows that is not what she meant: "It's a very delicate balancing act. Because while we try to make sure that [the protesters] were protected from the cars and the other things that were going on, we also gave those who wished to destroy space to do that as well." CHARLES HALL

Re: 'Don't give Baltimore the right to loot' (Metro, April 29) Like letter writer Sal Giarratani, I'm equally appalled at how weeks of nonviolent protests in Baltimore have given way to a single day of rioting. I trust Mr Giarratani is equally outraged at the equally destructive riot that broke out three weeks ago in Lexington, Kentucky after the NCAA basketball tournament, and the one there last spring after the national championships, and the two in 2012 after the national finals. Of course those rioters were mostly white and prompted by basketball games, not mostly black and prompted by a murder of an unarmed man by the police, so they didn't make the national news.

2015 NFL Mock Draft | by Tony Williams

No. 1

Bucs
(2-14)

Jameis Winston, QB, FSU — He's essentially been the top pick since he declared. Lovie Smith and his staff have done their vetting, and it seems clear he's their man.

No. 2

Titans
(2-14)

Leonard Williams, DE, USC — Mariota could be selected here, but no one knows by whom. Here's saying the Titans stand pat, coaches up Zach Mettenberger and takes the draft's best prospect.

No. 3

Jaguars
(3-13)

Dante Fowler, LB, Florida — This may be the second-most obvious pick. The Jags need an outside rusher for Gus Bradley's scheme, and Fowler just may be the premier rusher in the draft.

No. 4

Raiders
(3-13)

Kevin White, WR, West Virginia — Smart money says GM Reggie McKenzie does it the "Raider way" and selects the bigger, stronger, and faster guy. No disrespect to Amari Cooper, but it's White.

No. 5

Redskins
(4-12)

Vic Beasley, LB, Clemson — The most explosive of all the linebacker prospects, Beasley has bulked up from 225 pounds to 246. He certainly looks the part of a fearsome pass-rusher.

No. 6

Jets
(4-12)

Amari Cooper, WR, Alabama — It'll be hard for Mike Maccagnan to pass on the former 'Bama star, even though in all honesty, they don't really need a wideout with Brandon Marshall.

No. 7

Bears
(5-11)

Marcus Mariota, QB, Oregon — The Bears new coaching staff isn't married to Jay Cutler, and though they have defensive needs, Mariota's the guy. If someone doesn't trade up to snatch him first.

No. 8

Falcons
(6-10)

Alvin "Bud" Dupree, LB, Kentucky — Dupree is a versatile pass rusher and would be a good fit for Dan Quinn's attacking defense. Missouri linebacker Shane Ray could've gone here.

No. 9

Giants
(6-10)

Danny Shelton, DT, Washington — The Giants have needs along both lines. Shelton would be an instant upgrade, with only Johnathan Hankins as the lone interior threat.

No. 10

Rams
(6-10)

Brandon Scherff, OT, Iowa — The Rams have a need for a game-changing wideout to help ease Nick Foles' transition to St. Louis' offense, but will settle for an anchor on the offensive line.

No. 11

Vikings
(7-9)

DeVante Parker, WR, Louisville — Teddy Bridgewater made steady progress last season and Parker, the third of the top three receivers on the board, could kick Norv Turner's offense into full gear.

No. 12

Browns
(7-9)

Nelson Agholor, WR, USC — The Browns seem doomed no matter what, but Agholor has sure hands and can beat you deep. Cleveland could also be active in the trade department. Watch out.

No. 13

Saints
(7-9)

La'el Collins, G, LSU — He'd be a great replacement in New Orleans for Ben Grubbs, who was traded to Kansas City. He has a mean streak and the potential to play right tackle or at either guard.

No. 14

Dolphins
(8-8)

Trae Waynes, CB, Michigan State — There's a need at cornerback for a Dolphins defense that is loaded in the pass-rushing department. Waynes is the best corner in the draft.

No. 15

49ers
(8-8)

Randy Gregory, LB, Nebraska — He only fell this far due to off-field concerns about a failed marijuana test at the combine. He's got bona fide top 10 talent as a dynamic linebacker.

No. 16

Texans
(9-7)

Breshad Perriman, WR, UCF — He's the most polarizing of all the wideouts in the draft, due to his intoxicating speed (4.24 at his pro day) and his penchant to drop some passes.

Quick picks

- 17. Chargers - Todd Gurley
- 18. Chiefs - Malcom Brown
- 19. Browns - Arik Armstead
- 20. Eagles - Landon Collins
- 21. Bengals - D.J. Humphries
- 22. Steelers - Marcus Peters
- 23. Lions - Eddie Goldman
- 24. Cards - Melvin Gordon
- 25. Panthers - Ereck Flowers
- 26. Ravens - Dorial Green-Beckham
- 27. Cowboys - K. Johnson
- 28. Broncos - Cam Erving
- 29. Colts - TJ Clemmings
- 30. Packers - S. Anthony
- 31. Saints - Phillip Dorsett
- 32. Pats - Laken Tomlinson

NBA

Brooklyn can't overcome slow
Game 5 start

The Hawks took a 3-2 series lead Wednesday night, but the Nets more than proved that this is an even matchup, using a big fourth quarter run to make things intriguing. Atlanta held off the Nets, 107-97, at Philips Arena as the series shifts back to Brooklyn for Game 6 Friday (8 p.m., ESPN).

A 3-pointer by Bojan

Bogdanovic early in the fourth cut Atlanta's lead to six and back-to-back 3's from Joe Johnson late in the fourth brought the Nets to within three, but a pair of Al Horford jumpers and some Jeff Teague magic in the paint proved too much for Brooklyn. The Nets shot themselves in the feet in the first quarter as the Hawks outscored them 33-16.

going 4-for-4 from 3-point land. Jarrett Jack was also strong off the bench for the Nets, contributing 18 points.

Coming off his own big scoring night, Deron Williams was held to just five points.

DeMarre Carroll, Horford and Teague all had 20 or more points to lead the Hawks in scoring.

Atlanta jacked up 33 shots from beyond the 3-point stripe, hitting 13. Kyle Korver hit five of the 13. MATT BURKE

Tanaka freeze?

Girardi concerned with Tanaka

Speculation began when Masahiro Tanaka was put on the disabled list after getting tightness in his forearm and wrist in Detroit. Is the weather to blame? Tigers hurler David Price thinks so. Yankees manager Joe Girardi isn't sure. "Does it have anything to do with Detroit? I can't tell you 100 percent no" Girardi said, referring to the 34 degrees at game time. "He didn't tell us that he felt something after Detroit. We didn't know until [Tuesday]."
